FKP Architects Named Among Dallas' "Best Places to Work"

FKP Architects has been named among Dallas Business Journal's 2009 Best Places to Work.

FKP earned this valued distinction by achieving a best practice score as defined by Quantum Workplace, an independent research firm that administered the employee surveys on behalf of the Dallas Business Journal. The best practice scores are 90 or higher for small companies (10-99 North Texas employees), 87 or higher for midsize companies (100 to 499 employees) and 85 or higher for large companies (500 or more local employees).

"We are tremendously honored to be named among Dallas Business Journal's Best Places to Work," said Dan Killebrew, AIA, NCARB, firm principal and managing director of FKP Architects' Dallas office. "Our greatest asset is our people. Their success is our success, and because of that, we strive to create an optimum work environment. It makes this recognition all the more special knowing it is from them."

All Best Places to Work companies were announced on July 24 in alphabetical order online at <http://dallas.bizjournals.com/dallas/event/5556>. Ranking order of honoree companies will be revealed at a special Best Places to Work awards luncheon on September 17, 2009 and published in the September 18th edition of the publication.
